JULIETTE ARRIGHI DE CASANOVA, 31 INTERIOR DESIGNER AND STYLIST

Juliette began her career at a stylist for decor magazines, where she honed her skills beside one of South Africa's leading interior designers. 'I've always been drawn to beautiful homes and interiors. Plus my mother, who has an inherent need to surround herself with beautiful things, taught me to appreciate quality textiles, unique spaces and inspiring creatives,' Juliette says. She has worked on many interior projects to date, but says a particular sizeable one in Angola really was a highlight for her. 'Next, I'm working on a truly innovative home – a first of its kind in Africa – and can't wait for it to be revealed.' @juliviving

JUAN STOCKENSTROOM, 36 ARTIST

After working locally and abroad as a retoucher and a photographer's assistant, Juan has refined his personal photographic skills, which he expresses through his art. He describes himself as 'an emerging photographic artist with an irreverent approach to playing with imagery'. Fiction plays a big part in his work and he is influenced by the over-dramatised performance, hard lighting, Technicolor and eerie cinematic orchestral music of vintage American horror, thriller and sci-fi cinema. Although he has exhibited both in SA and internationally and won various awards, Juan says he is most proud of his first solo exhibition, which is currently on in Cape Town, at PH Centre Photo Gallery. @jstocken

MASONWABE NTLOKO, 21 ART DIRECTOR

In 2012 Masonwabe, a.k.a. The 21st Century Black Man, could have given up after being diagnosed with optic nerve failure, but he came back with his first solo exhibition in 2017 – a major success for the newest kid on the block. It's no wonder Design Indaba named him one of its 2018 Emerging Creatives. His Instagram account is created to take the form of a vertical book, exhibiting his latest work in one single image that scrolls down to reveal ever-cooler ideas, so do a deep dive when you have time to give it your full attention. @the21stcenturyblackman

MINENHLE NTULI, 25 ARCHITECTURAL DESIGNER

Architecture, says Minenhle, has always been the only thing he's really wanted to do. Having graduated from UKZN in 2013, he practised as an architectural technologist for two years before signing up for the 2016 edition of SABC3's Win A Home competition, during which he created interiors for an apartment in Paarl that are, he says, one of the highlights of his career to date. Minenhle says he is currently 'finishing' the furniture designs he created as one of Design Indaba 2018's Emerging Creatives; we can't wait to view the results. @dust_za
